Synopsis Books:

When actor Sean O'Reilly receives a flower bouquet containing a single black rose on set, he assumes they're from his boyfriend Nate. But they aren't. Flowers keep arriving for him after that, each with a black rose in the arrangement. Soon other things arrive as well, such as photos and a recording of Sean's voice. As the number of flowers dwindle with each bouquet, Sean begins to worry they're supposed to be some kind of a countdown ... but to what?

Fan Gene Scott worships Sean. He maintains a blog dedicated to the actor and writes out all his fantasies there. He wants Sean to belong to him, and only him, and he'll do anything to make the actor his own. He can't accept the fact that Sean has a boyfriend. To Gene, Nate might as well not exist.

Despite increased security and all efforts to keep him safe, Sean vanishes, and Nate feels as if his world has come tumbling down. When the police response is too slow for him, Nate enlists the help of his producer and bodyguard to find Sean. Will he manage to find his lover before Sean disappears forever? Or will Gene finally get what he's always dreamed of, and make Sean the love of his life, instead?
